My Aunt Judy, has completed her Journey to be with the LORD and her best friend and soulmate my Uncle Angie. I like all my many cousin's have been blessed with so many beautiful and loving Aunts and Uncles. Kirk and Mami, Mary and Ray, Dolly and Jim, Angie and Judy, Uncle Dominic, Aunt Mary Jayne, Uncle Fred, Aunt Pat, and yes even Uncle Corky. I wonder about the four aunts and uncles I never got to meet because they died as children. What would they have been like? Would they have had the same impact on my life that all these beautiful people have had? Knowing MA my Beautiful and strong Grand Mother who had all of us over every Sunday for spaghetti dinner I have no doubt. All those people and their children in a home the size of my garage, all talking at the same time. Well that's what Italians do. Now for the first time in my life I have no living Aunts or Uncles. Why am I not sad? I speak for all my cousins when I say we have now lost a generation of people who truly cared and loved us unconditionally. So I ask again why am I not sad? I think about the holidays when we all came together at some ones house and celebrated and loved each other and occasionally fought with each other but always kissed and hugged on the way out. Yet I still do not feel sadness. Why?

As I reflect on this I think GOD gave me the answer, You are not sad because I gave you all these wonderful people to shape you and love you. They are with ME now I have them in my arms. I got this. You still have your Mom and Dad I have blessed you with them. I gave you time to say goodbye to Judy to give her my bracelet. You still have all your wonderful cousins, what are you going to do with the time you have with them? And lastly you want to be sad because you wish they all could be there for your union with Heather, I tell you on that day look up they will all be there. And with his WORD i'm at peace. I love you Judy.
