He attended Raymer Elementary and Waite High School. Charles was a great storyteller and was known for his never-ending stories. Charles is preceded in death by his father, George Hendricks; sister, Chelsey Hendricks; and his grandparents.

The family would like to extend a special honorable mention to Edmund Rodriquez, Sr., Donna Hendricks, and the Mason Street moms Dawn Sheppard and Loretta Hannah, for their help in raising Charles like one of their own through the years. They are also forever grateful to everyone who has

“ I have so many memories of Charles especially him scaring me always giving me a heart attack. From falling out of trees to breaking all his toes on his one foot playing round up with the kids. He would always come by just to see how I was and to see if I needed anything. Always wanting to help someone. He had a huge heart and he will be missed by so many. I love you Charles and I am going to miss you

“ Charles loved food, me and my granddaughters would make christmas cookies. All different types of cookies, and put them in freezer bags. we thought they would make it to Christmas. Charles would come by every single day and get a freezer bag of cookies for himself. He so loved his sweets. Sometimes twice a day. I am going to miss so much about him especially his several phone calls every single day. Especially at the end of a phone call or w0hen he was leaving when he would say real low and fast "Luv u ma" like he was too kool to be emotional. He truly was Charles in charge!!!
