“ Jordan, I still can't grasp the fact that you are gone. I know you are in a better and more peaceful place now. However, we wish you were still here with us. From the moment I walked into Apple, you and Racquel showed me I could count on you, I had a friend in you. You were a great listener and even a better advisor. I will forever cherish the memories we were able to built together. You were the sunshine in that store, the clown as I would call you and the one person that no matter how bad your day was, was able to make anyone smile and laugh. I wish I was able to see this before to be able to attend to your ceremony.

My friend, my brother from work, I will miss you tremendously and I know work would not be the same without you there.

Thank you for everything you did for me and for brighten my days at work, for being one of the last people that were in your thoughts.

My prayers are with you, Racquel and your family.

Forgive me for not being at your ceremony or knowing when it was.

Love you, Ivette.

“ This is just so difficult to wrap my mind around. Same for everyone. Too soon. My heart goes out to Jordan’s family & close friends. I didn’t know Jordan well. I worked with him a few times at Starbucks & then he was a regular customer at my location for a while. He also sold me my phone & answered any technical questions that I had. Even knowing him a little bit, was enough to know that he was truly ‘good people.’ I hope you feel his spirit & find peace.
